

Appendix D: Possible funding sources

The funding options in this section relate only to what is available for groups/organisations resident in NSW. As many Aboriginal Nations & their languages cross over into Queensland, South Australia and Victoria, communities who are from those Nations may wish to investigate language funding available in those other states. In addition, many local Councils have funds available for local community activities, as such, communities, need to research their particular local government and regional public services to determine if there may be local funds for language work, for example, local and regional health, education, business ventures, etc.

The following websites may help you find other sources of government and non-government funding, which whilst not specifically targeting language programs, can be used to support a variety of projects. These websites also provide useful advice about the preparation of applications and grant program processes.

Large-scale, long-term, community-run language enterprises are registered with the Office of the Registrar of Indigenous Corporations (ORIC), e.g. Bularri Muurlay Nyanggan Aboriginal Corporation (BMNAC); Muurbay Aboriginal Language and Culture Cooperative; Wiradjuri Study Centre and Condobilin Corporation. Such not-for-profit organisations can also apply for charity status and may be eligible to be endorsed as deductible gift recipients (DGRs) by the Australian Tax Office (ATO). Thus donations from the public can add an additional source of funding.

Self-driven fund-raising and crowd-sourced funding for specific "one off" small Aboriginal language projects are also possible, e.g.:
